LONDON CONFERENCE CALL

Last month London-based Investment Quorum held its spring conference for clients and professional connections at the capital's Oxo Tower.

'Client feedback has been excellent,' says director of private clients Petronella West.

The event featured a keynote speech from Chris Watling, chief executive of Longview Economics. 'He's a very engaging speaker,' says West. 'His message was bearish, but delivered in a way that didn't cause panic.'

BRIDGWATER SERIOUS SCHOOLING

Ian McIver (pictured below), development director at Somerset-based Nexus IFA and Personal Finance Society (PFS) education officer for South Wales, has been offering advice to students studying business and finance at Welsh college Coleg y Cymoedd.

McIver has introduced the college to the PFS, and students have consequently heard from members on topics including pensions and financial services careers.

'We need to get more colleges involved in financial services if we are to attract future candidates to our profession,' says McIver.

EXETER NEW OFFICE

Prosperity Financial Advisors & Stockbrokers opened an office in Exeter last month to build on its existing presence in Hampshire and Scotland. The new hub will be at the Matford Business Centre in Marsh Barton.

'The town has a business buzz and a friendly feel where people know each other,' says Prosperity managing director Mark Newman.

MANCHESTER MATCH OF THE DAY

Manchester-based Sedulo Wealth Management is screening England's Euro 2016 matches at its Regency Club bar (yes, it has a bar inside the office).

The firm is also asking for donations for the Jason Roberts Foundation, which is sponsoring the Grenadan team at the 2016 Homeless World Cup. 'We're always doing something different,' says Paul Lindfield (pictured right), director of wealth management.
